The Secrets of Mixing Family and Business u003cbr/u003e

u003cbr/u003e

Big businesses are under fire today more than ever, with bailouts, scandals, and outrageous CEO salaries. But Samih Darwazah and his billion-dollar, multinational Hikma Group stand alone. u003cbr/u003e

u003cbr/u003e

With its solid ethical, inclusive, community-aware policies, the medicine-manufacturing giant is a formidable competitor in the world of Big Pharma while maintaining a people-first corporate culture that considers all employees kin and always puts family first. u003cbr/u003e

u003cbr/u003e

In Lessons to Grow a Billion-Dollar Company, Darwazah offers his invaluable insights into how he rose through the ranks of the international business world without once compromising his most valuable assets: the relatives who have stuck by him through thick and thin. u003cbr/u003e

u003cbr/u003e

While other moguls advise never mixing family and business, Darwazah shows instead how vital it is to keep those you love close in order to find both professional and personal success. u003cbr/u003e

The twenty-three hard-learned lessons he shares here-from u0026#34;hire wiselyu0026#34; to u0026#34;marry wiselyu0026#34;-offer a revolutionary model of doing business that encompasses all of life, not just the bottom line. u003cbr/u003e
